I have multiple getter methods that depend on a fact that the object they need to be applied to is valid. How do I refactor them all to a single method so that I can still access the member variables directly? (I can't really change the getter methods for performance reasons) EDIT: I want it to work the same as the implementations of itemize, alinear and tabular. They all can receive an object where all properties are valid (there is a difference, though, since itemize is an item, alinear is an axis, and tabular is just simply a table). Here is some example code of what I have: class Example attr_accessor :a, :b, :c def initialize(a, b, c) @a = a @b = b @c = c end end Example.new(1,2,3). c9d1549cdd

Shelter is a 4 vs 4 game of survival and tactics with over 100+ items and a deep meta where players will be faced with the ultimate test of skills and strategy. Shelter is a first person survival game set in a post-apocalyptic sandbox. The game is completely free to play and it's basically built to give the player many hours of entertainment. Built from the ground up, Shelter will offer you its fair share of challenge. Survival in Shelter is focused on the player's skill. The player's skill is key to success in this game. That's why Shelter offers over 100 different items. It's the quality of the items which will affect your experience in Shelter. Some of the items can be quite dangerous when used in the wrong way. But don't worry, when it comes to Shelter, those items are not as lethal as you might think at first sight. Shelter is a survival game. We want to make sure that survival is what you will be thinking about more than about killing and looting. When you start shelter there is only one goal in mind. Stay alive and try to survive as long as possible. You start out with an old car and most of your team will be in the car. You'll want to survive for as long as you can by creating camps, hiding from danger, building a fence and much more. While Shelter is a sandbox, most of your actions in Shelter are governed by the skill you've collected. This allows you to survive with extremely little items. The skill system allows players to pick up new items to customize their Shelter experience. Shelter builds upon gameplay experience with items found in the game and as you gain skill you will be able to explore new and more effective options.Nikon Coolpix P1000 4MP Digital Camera Nikon Coolpix P1000 4MP Digital Camera The Nikon Coolpix P1000 is the latest addition to the Nikon P series digital
