Over the years, the Master System became the most popular video game system of the 80s and 90s. In fact, it sold over 100 million units worldwide. But, in the United States, the vast majority of Master Systems were never sold and were simply thrown in the trash. According to a study from the Vintage Computer Center in Salt Lake City, the Master System is the top system that was never sold in the U.S. The SEGA Master System was released by SEGA in Japan on March 3, 1985, and in other countries later that year. It was the successor to the Mega Drive. Its main advantage over the Mega Drive was its higher quality sound and graphics compared to the Mega Drive. The Master System was released in several versions, including the normal handheld type and the more popular TV Game. The Master System's biggest rival was the Nintendo Entertainment System. The SEGA Master System had many amazing games, including the game that was the top selling game for the system, Sonic the Hedgehog. In fact, Sonic the Hedgehog was the top selling game of all time with about 50 million units sold. It also had Sega's other hit franchise, the Mario Brothers, which had several fantastic games. The SEGA Master System had many other games, such as Ghost & Goblins, Heavy Gear, Top Gear, Space Harrier, Ecco the Dolphin, Shadow of the Ninja, Nintendo World Cup Soccer, and Fantasy Zone. The SEGA Master System was a major success in Japan, where it sold over 250 million units, but in the U.S. it was not nearly as popular. No Master System games were released in North America, so the system was 6d1f23a050
